VOLUME NO. 1

LEAN AND MEAN. RCMP Constable Rick Shaw is one of two officers now on the streets in new duties as the local detachment's bicycle patrol officers. They expect to be very visible in their distinctive gear in efforts to deter crime. But because the bikes are silent, the officers anticipate an increased ability to catch law breakers. And, yes, they now have helmets.

Pedals propelling policing patrols

TERRACE — There's a new brand of cop riding the streets this summer.

Meet bicycle patrol officers Constable J.R. Walker and Constable Rick Shaw — Terrace's real Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

"It's great," says Walker, as he pedals down Lazelle Ave. "Where else do they pay you to do this?"

Yet it is serious business and the RCMP see the bike patrols as a golden opportunity to gain more visibility around town.

"If more people see us and realize we could be anywhere, that helps act as a deterrent," explained Shaw while demonstrating the recent purchases.

The bike patrols do accomplish things car or foot patrols don't.

A suspect darting down a back alley or along a park trail won't easily elude bicycle officers, who can travel through tight spots that would stop cars.

"It's pretty easy to sneak up to someone on one of these things," Shaw says of his silent two-wheel machine.

"When you're on the bike you can hear a lot more than when you're in the car," adds RCMP detachment commander Inspector Lawrence Yeske.

The two bike officers will be on municipal traffic duty, primarily in downtown Terrace and Thornhill, Walker says. They will also be doing school patrols and augment the existing foot patrols.

But they also anticipate making a lot of liquor and drug seizures.

Neither officer is a cyclist on his off time, but both say they're looking forward to their new posting.

The cycles themselves are top-of-the-line Kona Kilaueas, outfitted with high-beam headlights, battery packs and a host of other options.

The bikes cost $1,000 and the additional cycling gear and clothing brings the total price tag to about $1,500 for each officer.

They don't have flashing lights or sirens, but each officer wears bright yellow riding attire with the word 'Police' emblazoned across the back.

And they'll be keeping in touch with the detachment dispatchers by carrying portable radios.

Other officers will be using the bikes as well on a volunteer basis.

"There's a lot of interest," Walker said. "If we had the resources and the equipment we could easily have a 15- to 20-member bike squad here."

Part of the money for the bikes was raised by the Skeena Valley Rotary Club, which donated $1,000.

The squad is on the streets and rolling on a trial basis, but Walker says he thinks it's going to be a success.

"I think it's just a permanent part of policing that's going to be here to stay."

Queensway says 'yes' to sewer disposal system

TERRACE — A regional district director wants work to start as soon as possible on a $1.9 million sewer system for Queensway area residents.

Les Watmough made the comment following Saturday's referendum in which residents approved financing and construction of the system.

The vote ends years of debate, controversy and problems surrounding sewage disposal in that area.

The low-pressure sewer system, a first of its kind for this part of the province, will cost each resident $350 a year over 20 years, or an up-front lump sum of $2,770.

It'll cover the Queensway and Churchill Drive areas.

There will also be yearly maintenance costs of about $150, and a $1,000 fee for the hookup.

Final results showed 168 votes for and 124 against.

That's about 60 per cent of eligible voters in that area, said returning officer Elaine Johnson.

Watmough said he was happy with the results of the vote.

"Of course we're pleased - we've always believed that it's something the community needs. Our goal was a long-term betterment of the whole community."

Watmough noted that the regional district has lobbied five different municipal affairs ministers over the years.

Costs continually weighed against the project until the provincial government came up with a grant to cover 75 per cent of the project.

Pressure for a system mounted in the last few years after the Skeena health unit began issuing cease and desist orders to residents whose septic tank systems weren't working properly.

Raw sewage surfaced in local ditches and watercourses, spurring on the effort to come up with replacements.

Rick Hawke echoed Watmough's comments.

"As the chairman of the sewage group, I'm quite happy about it. The people affirmed our faith in the system."

Not everyone was satisfied with the results.

Queensway resident Susan Mehls said that she supported the project in principle, but was concerned by the lack of planning details.

"It's like voting for something that you've only been given a little information about," she said.

"The regional district should really listen to residents to hear their suggestions."

Mike Elgert, a member of the

'No' side, thought the process was flawed.

Elgert said renters voted yes because they wouldn't incur any costs from the system. He said that while residents would be charged an annual fee of $350 for the next 20 years, tenants would be charged nothing.

Elgert estimated that about 75 per cent of property owners voted against the system.

"The whole thing stinks - tenants in this area had no right to vote. It's just made everybody madder - we're not done yet."

"We're not hooking up to it (the proposed system). Our MLA is going to have to get involved whether he likes it or not."

Elgert also claimed that advisory committee member and Skeena Valley trailer park owner Mary Rauter told people to vote yes while she sat at the polling table.

"That's an out-and-out lie," said Rauter in response. "If I'd been doing that, the returning officer would've asked me to leave."

Earlier in the week, opponents of the system sought a court injunction to stop the referendum, on the grounds that renters should not be allowed to vote.

Company hopes mine deal is signed soon

TERRACE — A company which wants to mine a large asbestos tailing pile in the far northern part of the province hopes it can get a deal signed soon.

Minpro, an Australian company, thinks it can recover enough asbestos from the pile at Cassiar for a 10-year operation.

But first it needs to do a deal with the receiver appointed to wind up the affairs of Cassiar Mining Corporation which went into bankruptcy last year.

And it must also meet reclamation requirements of the provincial government.

The tailings pile, containing waste product from 40 years of operations from the Cassiar Mining Corporation, is about the only thing left in the tiny community.

Buildings were sold off last year following the mining company going into bankruptcy.

Any monies spent by Minpro for the tailings pile will be passed to the receiver.

That's because creditors of the company still have outstanding claims to be paid off.

Minpro official Gerry Lees was in B.C. last week talking to receiver Arthur Andersen and Company and to the provincial government.

"We're getting close. I would hope it is only a matter of days," said Lees last week.

If successful, Minpro would sign a deal giving it an option on the pile for a six-month study to see if its plans can be carried out.

Lees, who visited Cassiar recently, said a quick test of the tailings pile proved positive.

"But we need to do a more thorough study," he said.

Approval from the provincial government is tied to plans to contour the tailings pile and return the mine area and neighbouring townsites to as close to a natural state as possible.

The Cassiar Mining Corporation had posted a reclamation bond worth only $50,000 with the province.

Golden search looking good

TERRACE — A mining company is spending more than $6 million on an exploration project near Stewart this year.

Lac Minerals last year outlined one million ounces of gold at Red Mountain and is looking for more.

"We're starting to get into the area where it looks really interesting," said company spokesman John Pearson from Toronto last week.

An expenditure of $1 million last year at the property produced the one million ounce finding and that was triple what was found during work done in 1991, he said.

"We tripled the amount we found and obviously we'd like to do that again," added Pearson.

Lac acquired the property from Bond Gold Canada when it bought parent company Bond International Gold in 1989.

That's not nearly enough to cover costs, making the job a responsibility of the provincial government.

Provincial mines official John Errington said a successful deal with Minpro would relieve the province of paying between $3 million and $5 million in reclamation costs.

"The government doesn't have a lot of money now. This would be a savings," he said.

Red Mountain is 16km straight east of Stewart.

The one million ounces is defined from grading out showings in 2.8 million tonnes of ore.

"Our hope is that we can proceed to the feasibility study stage and eventually development," said Pearson.

Any development would either feature the company providing its own mining plant or working out a deal to use the existing one owned by Westmin.

That company developed its facilities for the Premier property but has cut back production because ore reserves didn't pan out as expected.

Work planned this year includes more than 60,000 feet of surface drilling and 3,500 feet for an adit to do underground drilling.

Lac wants to remove a 200 tonne bulk sample for laboratory analysis.

Takhar makes donation to get sewer

TERRACE — The city will receive an approximately $13,000 donation from one of its own councillors this year.

If, that is, owners of property abutting the 4800 and 4900 blocks of Twedle Ave. vote in favour of a proposed sanitary sewer project.

Mo Takhar wants to see the city extend sewer service from 4923 Twedle, where it ends now, to the edge of his Uplands subdivision development east of Munroe.

The first section of the extension would run to the east property line of Takhar's home at 4823 Twedle and would be carried out under a council-initiated Local Improvement Project (LIP).

But the LIP system requires a majority of property owners first agree to pay part of the cost of the project, their share being based on property frontage.

Because council did not include the project in this year's budget, Takhar offered the donation.

It's equivalent to 25 per cent of the likely cost and the provincial grant the city would normally be seek before proceeding.

However, Victoria has made it clear only high priority health or environmental safety projects have any chance of getting a grant this year and Twedle would not fall under either heading.

Given Takhar will provide that money, and assuming property owners' agreement, council has now agreed to go ahead with the project.

The remainder of the sewer extension, 330 ft., touches only on land owned by the city or Takhar.

Here, Takhar has offered to split the cost with the city and council has again agreed in principle to his proposal.

While agreeing neither was included in the '93 city budget, administrator Bob Hallor pointed out the city share of the LIP would be negligible.

Estimating the city share for the remaining 330ft. at $5,000, he said that could be pulled from the city's separate sewer fund.

And if council decides it can't find the money this year, Takhar has offered to pay the whole shot with the city repaying him when it sells its property.

Explaining the city stood to gain from the sewer installation, Hallor said, "We want to get our property serviced so it is more saleable."

Hospitals receive reminder on giving out information

TERRACE — A provincial government letter has asked all hospitals to give their employees and medical staff education on informed consent.

The letter, sent last August, says there are legal and ethical grounds for informed consent — the phrase for patients having information on aspects of a medical procedure so they can make a decision.

It was written after a coroner's report into the 1991 death of Terrace resident Myrna George recommended that "prospective patients for therapeutic abortions be apprised, in writing, of all possible complications that could result...."

George had an abortion at Mills Memorial Hospital but was transferred to Vancouver when complications set in. She died in Vancouver.

The letter did note informed consent is a matter between a person and a physician.

But it also noted that hospitals also have a role to play.

"The mechanism of ensuring informed consent has been obtained prior to surgery is left to the individual hospitals," the letter said.

"Informed consent, of course, both ethically and legally, should be obtained prior to any treatment or procedure where there exists material risk to the patient, whether or not that treatment is provided in a hospital."

The letter adds that information given a person must be understood by that person to meet the standard for informed consent.

Informed consent became an issue last month when the Terrace Pro-life Education Association asked Mills Memorial Hospital to provide written details on abortion to those considering the procedure.

The hospital's governing society has passed that request along to local doctors for their consideration.

New society bids on shelter effort

TERRACE — A group which wants to create a shelter for homeless people is forming a society.

Named after a woman who died under a tarp late last year, the Daisy Wesley Society held its founding meeting June 7.

The nine board members are this week preparing a submission to the social services and housing ministry for a shelter.

It follows a ministry request for bids to have a shelter in place by this winter.

Those in the Daisy Wesley Society have been working for some time on shelter plans under the auspices of the Terrace Anti Poverty Group Society.

It ran a temporary shelter this past winter in the Skeena Health Unit auditorium.

"We're excited. There are some real positive moves," said society vice president Leila Burton last week.

Bryce Bystrom is president, Linda Meyers is secretary, Darlene Gellinas is treasurer and board members are Carol Sabo, Gerry King, Dave Haizmsque, Burt Rogers and Trina Brooks.

The society also has two honorary members — Alex Wesley (husband to Daisy) and Tony Wilson — who'll act as connectors to homeless people.

"We've set up a special advisory committee to contain up to five homeless people," said Burton.

"We want to have some kind of vehicle so they can have input to the board. We want to make sure this continues to be a grassroots organization to keep in touch with people on the street," she said.

More than $100,000 has been approved for the creation of a hostel for men and women in Terrace.

The shelter would accommodate seven to 10 people, and the project could also include construction of a building, depending on whether the successful bidder finds a suitable existing building.

Those wanting to join the society can contact Burton at 635-3045 or 635-4631 and Bystrom at 635-1481.

One year in and compost project reaction is mixed

TERRACE — It's been over a year since the composting pilot project began, and so far the response has been mixed.

It began April 1, 1992, as a joint effort between the City of Terrace and the Uplands Nursery and is located at the Terrace landfill site.

The idea behind the project is to use materials such as grass and moss clippings, vegetables, peels and garden debris rather than simply having them going to waste.

"We ought to utilize every bit of waste product that we can," says Uplands owner Bruce Freeman. "There's always a shortage of compost."

Despite good intentions, there are persistent problems. People have refused to separate compost materials from non-compost garbage.

"A major problem that we're faced with is the thoughtlessness of people," comments Freeman.

He says people often throw unsuitable garbage such as glass and cans, into the pile and then cover it up with compost materials.

Freeman figures this happened because people didn't want to go to the adjacent garbage pile about 300 feet away.

To remedy the situation, the city put a dumpster beside the compost pile. But the unsuitable mixing has continued.

Kevin Freeman, Bruce's son and Cypress Landscaping owner, oversees the project and finds the situation frustrating.

"People are pigs - I can't believe it," he says.

He notes that all sorts of household garbage has been mixed in, including diapers.

To have a good final product, Bruce Freeman says that a screener machine is needed to filter the garbage out of the compost. But that would be too expensive because the pile is too small.

Bruce Freeman notes only a small percentage of people are mixing the wrong material with the compost. Kevin Freeman adds that it is a "high minority."

GOOD COMPOSTING requires good mixing and that requires the use of mechanical help in a pilot project between Uplands Nursery and the City of Terrace at the landfill site. But unwanted materials placed in the pile have made things difficult. Three-quarters of the compost goes to the nursery for sale while the city will use the remaining 25 per cent for its own purposes.

Despite good intentions, there are persistent problems. People have refused to separate compost materials from non-compost garbage.

City environmental services foreman Don Gare has a more optimistic view. While acknowledging the mixing problem, he also feels the project remains successful.

"There is a bit of a problem. It's hard to police. It's like anything - most people co-operate," he says. "As far as the city of Terrace is concerned, it's going great."

Bruce Freeman says the cost of the machine time needed to turn and mix the compost exceeds the value of the final product.

He suggests this might change if the finished compost was left on site. But that isn't possible unless a fence is built to protect the piles from thieves.

Compost piles are brought up to the Uplands nursery and mixed with topsoil for sale.

The city receives 25 per cent of finished compost, with the rest going to Uplands. Cypress Landscaping turns and mixes the compost piles.

According to Kevin Freeman, there were about 16-18 dump truck loads of finished compost after the first year.

He says the nutrient level of the final compost product isn't as high as expected and will try mixing in sawdust and possibly fertilizer to improve the end result.

News in brief

Highway Improved

HIGHWAYS MINISTRY crews are sealcoating Hwy37 south of Terrace to Onion Lake. The 27km long project began last week and, given favourable weather conditions, should be done next week.

Sealcoating involves putting a mixture of oil and gravel on top of an existing gravel or pavement surface. It extends the life of the road by keeping water from penetrating the existing road and by filling cracks.

The estimated $500,000 cost of this particular project is 15 to 20 per cent of the amount it would take to put a new lift of asphalt onto the highway. And it delays the time when a new lift is needed.

Highways ministry officials are asking that motorists drive at a maximum 50kph over the route until excess gravel is swept away. That'll reduce the chances of flying gravel damaging windshields. Expect minor delays during the project.

TV equipment donated

A NATIVE print journalism school in the Hazeltons is now turning its attention to television.

The Gitksan and Wet'suwet'en School of Journalism this week is getting $80,000 worth of television production equipment from Northwest Community College.

The school through the Gitksan and Wet'suwet'en Education Society is leasing the equipment for $1 a year until 1995.

"Our primary focus remains print journalism. But this equipment allows us to expand into the broadcast side so students can get their feet wet in that area of mass media as well," said school coordinator Doug Donaldson.

The journalism school began last September and offers a 16-month course divided into four semesters.

Forest jobs for jobless on way

THE UNEMPLOYED will be able to find work in the province's forests under a new plan announced last week by Forests minister Dan Miller.

Called the Forest Worker Development program, it will be financed through the BC 21 program to the tune of $32.6 million.

Sponsors will apply to the forest ministry and select their workforce from people referred to them by local social services and employment offices.

The program will target entry level (no experience), bridging level (some forestry experience) and fully trained workers. Projects, to include silviculture, recreation and road work, are intended to provide a full season's work.

A further $17 million from BC 21 will go into the Small Business Forest Enterprise program to provide silviculture and forest road jobs through local contractors.

Miller indicated the northwest, because of the size of its forest base, can expect to receive a significant chunk of the available money.

TFL renewals shortened

Tree farm licences will only be renewed for five year periods under Forest Act amendments introduced by the provincial government.

Cutting the renewal period in half would mean more frequent updating of the conditions of the licence, Forests minister Dan Miller said. That in turn would make it easier for government to ensure those conditions more closely reflected changing priorities.

The five-year replacement regulation effects licences coming up for renewal after July 1, not those where replacement has already been scheduled.

OPEN HOUSE

Five Year
Management Plan
Tree Farm Licence No. 1

Skeena Cellulose Inc. invites all interested parties to attend an open house to review the Management Plan for Tree Farm Licence 1. The licence encompasses parts of the Copper, Kalum, Nass and Skeena River watersheds.

A Management Plan is a strategic plan submitted by a company to the Ministry of Forests for approval once every five (5) years. The plan outlines the general goals and objectives, forest management strategies and operating procedures to be followed during the next 5 year period. The new Management Plan will be for the period 1993-1997.

The Management Plan will be available for viewing at Skeena Cellulose Inc. Woodlands Office, 4905 Keith Avenue, Terrace, B.C., from 8:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M., Monday through Friday, June 15 to July 15, 1993.

The open house will take place in Room 318, Coast Inn of the West, Terrace, B.C., Friday, June 18, 1993 from 5:00 P.M. to 9:00 P.M. and Saturday, June 19, 1993 from 9:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M.

Pension plums

So, after 14 years of parliamentary service Skeena NDP MP Jim Fulton sails into the sunset with an immediate pension of $39,000 a year. With a built-in protection inflation provision, the amount starts to increase once Mr. Fulton reaches 60. By the age of 75, the total package could reach $2.8 million.

That's a lot of money in anybody's books. Nobody begrudges the concept of pensions for Members of Parliament. We can say anything we want about politicians but by and large, they do deserve some kind of retirement income. We should also remember that Members of Parliament are prohibited from establishing private pension plans, making some kind of retirement income provision only natural.

Yet it raises questions of how much payments should be and when they should begin. Mr. Fulton's example is particularly startling. At the age of 43, Mr. Fulton is a young man with at least one more career ahead of him before reaching the common retirement age. That also represents one more opportunity for Mr. Fulton to sock away some money for retirement.

Think about that immediate $39,000 a year once more. It represents perhaps the annual federal income tax payments of 10 average income earners. Now don't let it be said you don't know where your tax dollar is going.

But there is a solution to this, one that will save taxpayers some money and still provide for Mr. Fulton and other retiring MPs. Pay him out. That's right. Give him a lump sum. Mr. Fulton would be able to take the amount and do anything he'd want with it. What the heck, make it $1 million. Invested properly, it could provide Mr. Fulton with an income at today's interest rates of at least $50,000 a year.

Sure, that's more than what Mr. Fulton would get now. But that initial one-time sum is nearly one-third less than what we'll have paid once Mr. Fulton reaches the age of 75.

The numbers get better when considering that nearly 50 MPs are calling it quits this year. Their estimated payments, if all reach the age of 75, could amount to $67.5 million. Giving each $1 million cuts that expense to $50 million. Jeppers. We could even throw in a gold watch and a banquet for each MP and still come out ahead.

Rant and rave

One of the best jobs in Canada is being an opposition member in a legislature or in parliament. The rant and rave game is to make the government look bad in the hopes it will be replaced when the next election rolls around.

The opposition Social Credit party is in just such a position with its criticism of rising welfare spending. Beginning last fall Socreds have pointed to those costs, saying there is not only fraud and abuse but a lack of iron in the provincial government's policy of giving welfare payments.

To its credit, the Social Credit party is correct. A provincial report now suggests as much as $36 million in welfare payments is paid out incorrectly and that fraud could top $100 million.

The provincial government is responding to that report by beefing up its fraud investigation capacity and by hiring more people to stop errors and fraud before they have a chance to take hold. All this works out to 211 more jobs in the social services ministry.

The Social Credit response has been to condemn the government for adding to the payroll at an estimated cost of $15 million a year. That's fine as a criticism but it fails if followed through. Surely any expenditure aimed at reducing what could be $136 million a year in errors and in fraud is an investment, not an expenditure. The Socreds can't have it both ways.

Little black box wars

Thanks for small mercies. Another Stanley Cup marathon has ended, finally freeing the television for general viewing. Remote control batteries have been replaced, blisters on the clicker thumb have hardened into calluses, and couples are speaking to each other again.

Next to disagreements over disciplining the kids and interference from in-laws, nothing is guaranteed to trigger a marital spat as a husband's hogging of the remote control. It's the plastic puck of domestic disputes.

Webster defines remote as "separated by a space greater than usual." That expresses my alienation after I've lost a channel choice to my husband.

Few things rile my temper as suddenly as my husband clicking through all the channels during each commercial break. For one thing, many channels break for a commercial at the same time, so instead of avoiding commercials, you end up watching snatches of many more.

I'm convinced manufacturers make remotes small to forestall physical fights they could foresee over airwaves supremacy. Remotes are too short to substitute for a rope in tugs-of-war, not heavy enough to be blackjacks. Still, they have all of a bone of contention's attributes.

And on evenings when television fare is as mouth watering as an astronaut's menu, we enliven our relationship squab-

Through Bifocals

by Claudette Sandeckl

bling over it. We come off with a combination of a grudge wrestling match, a name calling contest, and an emergency first aid competition.

But a remote is useful for more than channel-hopping and igniting arguments. Wedged under a door, it's a doorstop. It makes a fine paperweight - though light - for holding open a recipe book.

Nursing mothers - once in command of the remote - can manipulate their menagerie as effortlessly as a commercial pilot banking a jumbo jet. Without interrupting baby's dining pleasure, Mom can pick programs, adjust volume, even turn the screen to blessed black.

When youngsters are old enough to grasp that the remote is Daddy's toy and therefore off limits, it's an effective bribe.

Too bad Daddy doesn't share his remote. It has ideal contours for small hands to hold. Braille bumps add textural interest and enhance grip. Almost weightless, it reacts to a feather touch. Even random button punching produces interesting if unpredictable screen images.

It's great for introducing toddlers to hide and seek. Easily transportable, it hides perfectly between sofa cushions, in an apron pocket, behind a plant on a window-sill.

Left alone, children use it as a baseball, a hammer, even as a blunt instrument in dividing toy box spoils. Little ones who can't guide jello into their mouths nevertheless propel a remote with better aim than a campaigning politician pitching promises.

Unlike hockey, which breaks for a least two weeks in summer, family squabbles over the remote know no season.

Racing to fight racism not a very sound idea

VICTORIA — Whenever governments take steps to curb the spread of hate literature, I find myself torn in opposing directions.

My heart tells me to support such measures wholeheartedly, whereas my brain tells me to be cautious.

On the one hand, I welcome any reduction in hate literature to which we are exposed. On the other hand, I view infringements on freedom of speech with great trepidation, no matter how well-intentioned they may be.

The latest contribution to the protection of human rights by the NDP government is no exception.

Introduced in the B.C. Legislature as an amendment to the Human Rights Act, the new legislation is aimed at "clamping down" on hate literature, but the opposition says the government is going too far.

The amendment will outlaw the publication or display of anything that is likely to expose a person or group of persons to hatred or contempt. It strengthens existing human rights legislation by barring publication of discriminatory material.

The amendment, however, also removes a section stating that subject to other legislation, "a person may by speech or in writing, freely express his opinion on a subject."

Sounds like that one was written for newspaper columnists. Asked in the legislature whether he agreed with the extent to which the new legislation may inhibit free speech, Premier Harcourt said free speech was never meant to be absolute.

"That's why we have libel and slander laws. And that's why you can't yell 'fire' in a theatre," the premier said. True enough, but libel and slander laws aren't the question here. Potential muzzling of people whose views don't conform with mainstream society is.

Liberal leader Gordon Wilson says he supports the move to reduce or eliminate hate literature, but adds that he is alarmed by the removal from the Human Rights Act of the freedom of speech section.

Val Anderson, Liberal human rights critic, echoes Wilson's warnings, accusing the government of "trying to protect its beleaguered image by hiding behind new legislation" which, he adds, has the potential to suppress freedom of expression.

"This legislation goes too far by denying the right to freedom of expression which is the cornerstone of our democratic process. It is essential that society bring in stricter regulations to protect individuals and groups from hate mongers, but what the Harcourt government has done goes beyond this necessity," Anderson says.

And somewhat ominously if unnecessarily, Anderson warns that even the freedom of the press might be in danger from this legislation.

Well, I wouldn't go that far. Regardless of what legislation governments in Canada dream up, it always must pass the hurdle of the Charter of Rights, which guarantees freedom of speech and freedom of the press. We can look after ourselves, Val, but thank you just the same.

Anita Hagen, the minister responsible for multiculturalism and human rights, appeared somewhat surprised by the rocky ride the legislation received.

"Racial violence and racially-motivated attacks are on the rise around the world. We do not want this kind of hatred to take root in British Columbia, a province of ethnic, cultural and religious diversity," she said.

"Until now, there has been little the province could legally do to take action against hate literature or hate activities. This amendment fills the legislative gap," the minister said.

Again, I find it very difficult to disagree with the intent of the legislation. The rising tide of racial hatred and violence in Canada saddens me because it goes against everything I believe the majority of this country's citizens still stand for.

But I can't help but be alarmed by some NDP members' reaction to the legislation, who seem to harbor hopes that it might help bring people like newspaper columnist Doug Collins to heel.

Collins is no friend of mine. His ramblings often come close to being racially-motivated attacks, but I hope I never see the day when he is silenced because those who oppose him because they have legislative power to shut him down.

The first line of defence against racism and hatred has always been and will always be an enlightened society in which the silent majority has the courage to publicly condemn the vocal minority that insists in spreading racism and hatred.

The last word goes to Val Anderson: "The danger of this bill and what it actually does is teach our citizens to fight hate with hate. One can only fight hate with truth and fact."

RECYCLING DEPOT volunteer Scott Schooner oversaw the closing just before Christmas of the Skeena Valley Recycling Depot he helped start two years earlier. High transportation costs and plunging prices for recyclables have combined to make recycling a losing proposition in the north.

NUMBERS

■ 41,500 TONNES of garbage was dumped in the Kitimat-Stikine Regional District in 1991. (3.4 million tonnes province-wide).

■ 164 TONNES of tires and 140 tonnes of batteries were recycled in 1991 from the regional district. (2.4 million scrap tires and 720,000 car batteries recycled province-wide.)

■ THE AVERAGE household in the region dumped 3,011 kilograms of garbage in 1991. (Provincial average: 2,347 kg)

■ THE AVERAGE household in the regional district recycled 26.6 kilograms of waste in 1991. (Provincial average: 391 kg/household)

■ $23,000 WAS the City of Terrace's subsidy to the Skeena Valley Recycling Depot in 1992.

■ THE CITY of Terrace will spend $467,000 on garbage collection and dump operations in 1993.

■ THE Kitimat-Stikine Regional District will spend $243,000 on its dump sites in 1993.

Province prods north to recycle

We get failing grade

IF VICTORIA'S provincial recycling report was a report card, we'd flunk.

Only one per cent of the waste in the Kitimat-Stikine Regional District was recycled in 1991, according to the report.

While that was an improvement — our recycling rate is listed as zero in 1990 — the region lags far behind the provincial average of 14 per cent.

The report measures the province's progress towards the provincial goal of a 50 per cent reduction in waste by the year 2000.

Environment minister, John Cashore, called the numbers "very encouraging" and said people are reducing, reusing and recycling at an unprecedented rate.

The regional district of Dewdney-Alouette rung up the highest rate of recycling in the province — 25 per cent — followed by Greater Vancouver's 18 per cent and the Cowichan valley's 16 per cent.

The communities with the highest numbers are concentrated in the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island — close to markets for recyclable materials.

In more remote parts of the province, where the high costs of transporting recyclables to markets often makes recycling impossible, the numbers were dismal.

Fully half the regional districts in B.C. had recycling rates of less than five per cent.

Fully half the regional districts in B.C. had recycling rates of less than five per cent.

The Bulkley-Nechako Regional

District managed the highest recycling rate of the north: nine per cent.

The Kitimat-Stikine Regional District is hiring a consultant this fall to begin the process of developing a Solid Waste Management Plan for this area. That plan must be completed by 1995.

One of the possibilities that will be examined is the creation of one large "super dump" serving the Terrace and Kitimat areas.

The separation of recyclable materials for transportation to market would likely take place at the same site.

Terrace's volunteer-operated Skeena Valley Recycling Depot closed at Christmas after Terrace City Council refused to continue subsidizing it.

The depot was losing money on every type of recyclable material it was collecting.

Governments creating myths

Think before you spend

BY CYRIL SHELFORD

There is no doubt the strike by teachers in many areas of the province should be a clear signal to all of us in B.C. that the collective bargaining and right to strike in the public service have proved conclusively to be a total failure.

The use of our children as pawns to obtain higher wages is morally wrong, not only because it places the next generation in jeopardy of receiving a first-class education but also because of the young teachers coming out of teaching training.

The more money paid to the present teachers means that few new teachers will be hired, which is a shame. The latter surely have some rights also.

There is a great difference with collective bargaining in the public sector compared to that in the private sector where, when things are difficult with a company, they have no choice but to hold the line. Otherwise they go out of business.

In the public sector, however, governments of all kinds can keep going as they can either raise taxes to pay the increase or else borrow money — standard practice of all brands of governments since the early 1970s and the reason for our massive debt in all provinces and the federal government.

The latter takes more than $60 billion a year to pay the interest alone without any debt reduction at all. In fact, the debt is still going up close to $50 billion a year.

Bargaining in the public sector is totally different, especially close to elections when governments need the votes of their union workers. Because of this need, governments do not stand firm like managers do in the private sector because such managers do not have to worry about votes.

Even worse is the constant increase in taxes and other user charges to companies and individuals in order to pay for the increases.

Such increases granted to the public sector workers make it impossible for companies to hire more young people coming out of schools and universities, because they have less money available for expansion or renovations of homes or factories after the huge tax grabs from governments.

It is a myth when governments of all stripes talk about new government programs to create jobs for thousands of people; they should also say that in order to achieve this it will mean higher taxes and a loss of jobs in the private sector.

There is only one way where governments can create jobs without a loss in the private sector and that is, if they have governed well during good times and have built up a large surplus, then they can truly create jobs without tax hikes or borrowing.

I simply cannot understand why so many well-educated people in today's society are so naive as to think that governments can do this.

Even with surpluses to spend, governments should never use this money to pay increased wages and salaries to anyone simply because when the economy takes a downturn they are stuck with high wages and less revenue.

Governments should only spend surplus funds taken from the taxpayers on one-shot programs such as roads, bridges, power generation, hospitals and schools — but never on ongoing programs which only escalate the total cost of government for years to come.

I find it difficult to understand why so many people over the last 20 to 25 years have not understood that governments have no money of their own.

Before governments can spend it on programs, the money all has to come initially from taxes of all kinds.

Cyril Shelford was an agricultural minister and represented two northern B.C. ridings under two Social Credit governments.

TO THE TERRACE STANDARD

Hospital needs more people

Dear Sir:

On April 27, 1993, I was taken to the Terrace hospital by ambulance. I had excruciating pain in the lower back which made it almost impossible to walk. Even to try and turn onto my side I felt like crying out.

I arrived at 1:15 p.m. after a three-hour drive. The nurses were very helpful and caring, but I was told the doctor would not be able to see me until 5:30 p.m. when he was finished at the clinic. The nurses had to phone the doctor again and were told to give me a shot of Demerol, "to tide me over till he gets there".

I was not impressed one little bit, actually mad was the way I felt. Why is there no doctor on call at the hospital? There should be one there at all times. This kind of treatment is deplorable.

I was admitted to the hospital and underwent x-rays and therapy. The following week, my doctor said I could go home on Friday or Saturday if the bed wasn't needed. There is no surgery on weekends.

I live 165 miles from Terrace and my husband was able to pick me up on Friday, but on Thursday, the nurse told me I had to leave that day. I told her I had no place to stay and she said "I would have to get a motel room".

How was I to get there? Who was to pay for the room? The hospital? I don't think so. Isn't the staff always telling patients not to keep valuables and much money in the hospital?

After several long distance phone calls, I was able to find someone in Kitwanga to come and get me. It was an inconvenience at the time for them but they did help me out and I do thank them.

When I was getting dressed I started hurting all over again when I bent down. I was not ready to go home yet. The other ladies in my room were shocked that I was kicked out of the hospital when I was in such pain.

Yes, kicked out is the only word to describe how I was discharged. When I left, I counted four beds already empty. One more night wouldn't have been an inconvenience to the hospital as it was to me.

I understand there have been many cutbacks in the medical profession which is ridiculous. Why should the patients have to suffer. The medical staff are also suffering as there are never enough to cover the work required. I am absolutely disgusted with the way I was treated. I do thank the nurses in Emergency for their comfort during my ridiculously long wait.

Something has to be done about the lack of staff and all the cutbacks. I think it should start with the staff and the public. What happens if someone is in an accident and is bleeding? Do they have to wait for hours to see a doctor. My situation was just as important and so are the others in the Emergency ward. Why would we go there if it isn't an emergency?

There should be a doctor at all times in the hospital who could look at the patient, or at least come when they are needed.

I wonder how many other people have had to wait for hours and be treated so badly. Something must be done and it's time we said something to our government. I know I am certainly going to say something.

Val Legros,
Meziadin Lake, B.C.

Vote needed

Dear Sir:

The legislative reform committee held hearings in Terrace on two proposals May 27. One of these proposals is called "referenda on initiatives" and it received overwhelming support from voters when it was put to referendum in the 1991 provincial election.

If the B.C. government were to adopt legislation requiring referenda on initiatives, voters would have the right to petition for a proposed policy, program or legislative amendment to be put to the electorate in a referendum.

If approved, the results would be binding on the government. That is, the government would be forced by referendum to enact the legislation if a majority of voters supported it.

If and when we are given this right to referenda, I propose that the people of British Columbia petition the provincial government to hold a referendum on international trade agreements such as the Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement and the North American Free Trade Agreement.

How can the federal government, through such trade agreements, impose regulations and laws in areas — tourism, mining, recreation, housing and municipal affairs — where the federal government has no or little jurisdiction? These, after all, are areas of provincial, not federal, jurisdiction.

How can the federal government arbitrarily impose such agreements without any consultation or debate, without even asking British Columbians if we want to be a part of such trade pacts?

As Canadians, we should be allowed to make an informed and balanced decision on such a crucial and far-reaching policy, a policy that will change the face of B.C. and Canada as we know it, a policy that could affect our freedom to make our own decisions.

If we wish to have any say in the matter, or want to find any avenue out of such irreversible agreements, then we must face this challenge now, before it is too late.

Yours sincerely,
Norm Lavallee,
Terrace, B.C.

Drive slow

It'll take longer to drive to Kitimat this week.

The highways ministry is doing some work on the highway.

It is sealcoating the highway. Sealcoating is made up of oil and gravel. This is put down on top of the pavement.

Sealcoating protects the highway. It makes the pavement last longer.

Traffic may be held up for 20 minutes at a time until the work is done.

Drivers are being asked to also go slow.

That's because there will be rocks on the road for a bit.

The rocks can crack windshields if cars drive fast.

Rare planes put on block

TERRACE — What are believed to be the last three aircraft of their kind in the world are for sale.

The Bristol Freighters, stored at the airport, belonged to Trans Provincial Airlines before the company went into receivership earlier this year.

Efforts to sell the aircraft have so far failed and the accounting firm running the company's affairs is beginning to advertise.

"There's no minimum but we are looking for a reasonable offer," William Choo of Coopers and Lybrand said last week.

The aircraft originally came from Britain and are prized for their ability to carry cargo.

Their main feature is a large, round nose which divides in half to serve as the unloading and loading bay. The pilots sit atop the nose.

Locally, the Bristols flew into the Bronson Creek airstrip in the Iskut Valley to serve mining and mineral exploration companies.

The Prince Rupert and Queen Charlotte Islands portion of Trans Provincial was sold weeks ago to Harbour Air from the lower mainland.

Choo said there has been some interest shown but not of sufficient financial weight to justify a sale.

"We're not just going to give them away," he said.

Choo added that the rare nature of the aircraft might increase their eventual purchase price.

He cautioned that the aircraft and spare parts are being sold as is, and that work will be needed to bring them up to standards.

"Anyone that buys them, will have to do the work," Choo said.

READY AND waiting for a buyer are three rare Bristol Freighter aircraft. They belonged to Trans Provincial Airlines until that company went into receivership earlier this year.

The pair has done joint marketing before and decided that combining in one store complemented each other.

Their store still permits the pair to spend time with their families or on other tasks, said Merrill last week.

Merrill has been in business for five years and Marlow for two.

TO THE TERRACE STANDARD

Bunny attacked

Dear Sir:

Although this town is blessed with much beautiful scenery, one of the sights in which my heart particularly delights is the drive across the Skeena River which divides Terrace and Thornhill.

When I choose the route across the "new" bridge, my eyes delight in the seasonal changes of dress of the graceful poplars on Ferry Island. Their bare winter skeletons first don the shy young green buds of spring's promise, which grow and deepen to the lush green of summer.

Then, with the first frost, the trees blaze forth in autumnal splendor with a daring display of shimmering gold before the harsh November winds once again undress them for their winter rest.

The panorama of the mountains set against the bold blue sky is awe-inspiring. And the river itself, is endlessly fascinating, changing its mood with the season and the weather. In winter, the Skeena slyly hides beneath a deceptively peaceful blanket of snow and ice. Spring thaw and the river shows its power, impatiently ploughing up piles of ice and pushing them aside.

Late spring rains and run-off from the mountains swell the river to a mad, muddy torrent. In the heat of summer, the river relaxes, its waters calmed to a dull jade colour as it continues its steady journey to the sea.

Another sight which impacted me greatly as a young child when we first moved to this town was Terrace Mountain in the autumn. The old bridge was still the only way into town and we children delighted in the novelty of waiting for the light to change before crossing the bridge.

In autumn, looking up to the mountainside, one beheld a delightful display of fall colours, bands of gold, yellow, orange and occasional splashes of red blending with the deep evergreen.

However, this beautiful sight is sure to be ruined this autumn. Some bozo or group of bozos (I'm sorry I can think of no polite term) has decided to inflict a display of their limited imagination and artistic skills upon the rest of us by defacing the side of Terrace mountain.

I was driving along Queensway when I first caught sight of it and I squinted in disbelief, sure that my eyes were deceiving me. Next I felt my stomach clench in physical revulsion when I realized that, yes, there really was a Playboy bunny symbol shining down from the rock-face which, in bygone years has been traditionally adorned with the year of the current grad class.

I have been whole-heartedly in favour of the new tradition of painting wooden grad signs - most of them are colourful and imaginative and they allow the grad class to celebrate their achievement without permanently marring the natural beauty of the landscape. It has been good to see the rock face on Terrace mountain fade to its natural grey tones in recent years.

Bad enough there is anything on the rock-face again to mar the scenery, but why, oh why, the Playboy bunny symbol? Did the "artist" think they were being cute or daring?

Is it a mad conspiracy to promote Hugh Hefner's corporate empire? I think most of us would consider it extremely poor taste if, for instance, McDonald's decided to display their golden arches up there - or maybe, the city could get some extra revenue by leasing the rock-face as advertising space.

Still, all jesting aside, for many of us the "cute" Playboy bunny is an offensive symbol. Pornography was largely an underground business until Hugh Hefner legitimized it in the 50s with his Playboy magazine. Since then pornography has grown to a $4.5 billion industry in Canada alone. Pornography is a moral evil. It hurts the women and children it exploits and it hurts men, the majority of its consumers.

Pornography and the Playboy philosophy of casual, recreational sex preceded the feminist movement of the late 60s and early 70s. I believe the so-called "sexual revolution", the discovery of the birth control pill, and the legalization of abortion stem from a corporate agenda to turn sex into a profitable commodity.

As much as the feminist movement would like to claim credit for these dubious "achievements", I think the credit should go more to Hugh Hefner and his irresponsible, immoral philosophy.

Pornography and the philosophy behind it have contributed far more harm to the family than the feminist movement.

And what answer does the Playboy bunny have for all those suffering from AIDS and other STDs, the unfortunate victims of this playboy philosophy of casual sex?

So, ultimately, besides being visual pollution, what we really have glaring down at us from Terrace mountain is a corporate hate symbol. We would not tolerate a swastika up there and we should not tolerate this.

Will some agile person please get some grey paint and blot out this ugly blemish on our beautiful landscape.

Council raids land fund

Shelter costs more

TERRACE — Having agreed to trim its original bid, Nesbitt Construction last week began excavation work for the city's new animal shelter.

Although low bidder on the job, Nesbitt's quote of $371,000 was still $21,000 more than the figure council had put in the budget.

But after two days of meetings last month with city staff and consultant McElhanney Engineering Services, Nesbitt dropped its price to $320,000.

Although the reduction was achieved by redesigning some aspects of the shelter, McElhanney emphasized that had been done "without compromising the function of the building."

Despite the change the shelter will still end up costing more than originally planned.

That's because the city has to find nearly $50,000 more to pay McElhanney for design and tender services and supervising the project through to completion.

Faced with a final cost of $370,000, council decided to draw the missing $20,000 from its Land Acquisition Reserve fund.

That same fund is already providing $100,000 for the project, but the city plans to replenish it with the money it receives for selling the land on which the existing shelter sits.

The remaining $250,000 will be covered through short-term borrowing.

The new shelter replaces a 28-year-old building which has been showing its age in recent years.

At more than 3,000 sq.ft., it will be three times the present facility.

It will include double the number of dog 'kennels', outside runs, a separate room for cat cages and a wildlife holding area.

The proposed medical room, private office and showers for staff would be among the new features.

Described by permits director Bob Lafleur as "high security and low maintenance," it will be a concrete block/metal roof structure, enclosed in a chain link compound and alarmed throughout.

Based on the time Nesbitt expects the work to take, it should open in early October.

IF ALL goes according to plan, the city's new animal shelter will be open by October. The project is costing more than original estimates.

Gov't to boost public relations

TERRACE — The provincial government is spending more than $200,000 this year to put public relations people into the regions.

One of six communications officers will be coming to Smithers to cover the northwest.

The plan is to have all six people in place by August, says Claudia Wilimovsky of the government communications office.

Salary cost from August to the end of the budget year next March are estimated at $192,000 while amounts for office rent, travel and other expenses have yet to be worked out.

"We believe too much of the time that smaller communities rely on the trickle down effect from Victoria and Vancouver," said Wilimovsky of the plan.

In addition to Smithers, officers are being put in Kamloops, Prince George, Nelson, Nanaimo and Whalley. A director has been hired to oversee the officers.

Salaries could top off at $49,900 a year but most officers are expected to start at $47,000.

The officers are to provide better contacts for smaller news operations and for members of the public.

They'll also help arrange visits and tours by cabinet ministers.

"These are posted civil service positions — not OIC appointments," said Wilimovsky in referring to Order-in-Council positions that don't have to go through a regular government hiring procedure.

She said the new positions aren't viewed as duplicating existing communications jobs spread throughout government ministries.

Money for the jobs is coming from existing budgets and there'll be no additional government spending, Wilimovsky added.

Mill put on list

TERRACE — Skeena Cellulose recently received a pleasant surprise from the Gitwinksihkw Band Council.

The council nominated the mill for the Minister's Environmental Award in the business/industry category.

"It came as a complete surprise," said Tim Fenton, a resource planning forester at the plant.

Council member Art Azak said that the band nominated the mill because of company efforts to enhance the valley's fish habitat.

The awards were announced during Environment Week, June 5-12.

Ballard Power Systems Inc. from North Vancouver beat out Skeena Cellulose for the top industry prize.

CLOSE CALL - ambulance workers attend to an boy involved in a recent bike accident on Kalum St. Luckily, the victim was wearing a helmet. Corp. Dave Pollock said the incident highlighted the need for people to wear bike helmets.

Association pushes helmets

TERRACE — A recent bicycle accident on Kalum Street resulted in a close call for a ten-year-old boy.

The boy, who sat on the handlebars while his father rode the bike on the sidewalk, got his feet caught in the spokes, which caused the bike to flip.

As a result, the boy sustained ankle and elbow injuries. But he escaped more serious injury because he was wearing a helmet.

Corp. Dave Pollock said the incident highlighted the need for people to wear bike helmets.

"If he wasn't wearing a helmet, it could have been much worse," he said.

The B.C. Head Injury Association has kicked off a campaign to encourage people to wear helmets. The association plans to distribute an information pamphlet to community centres, bicycle shops, schools and rehab centres during June.

The pamphlet contains some frightening statistics. Each year, 60 children die in Canada from bicycle accidents, mostly due to head injuries. 70-80 per cent of bike rider deaths are caused by head injuries.

But there's also some good news - serious head injury can be reduced by as much as 85 per cent by wearing a helmet.

In Terrace, every school is assigned an officer from the RCMP detachment, who gives talks on bicycle safety. Bike rodeos are sometimes held.

The rodeos are obstacle courses of sorts where students learn how to ride their bicycles safely and responsibly.

Council shorts

Extra traffic causes concern

MOUNTAIN VISTA residents have told council they're worried about the extra traffic a new sub-division will cause.

The development is going in just to the east of the existing properties and would be reached via Mountain Vista. The first of six stages calls for 24 lots to be developed on the more than 50 acre parcel.

In a letter supported by two-thirds of the neighbourhood, residents pointed out theirs was a "quiet residential street with many small children".

Maintaining it was not designed to take the extra traffic the sub-division would generate, they called on the city to ensure the new development included a paved access on to McConnell Ave.

Clerk administrator Bob Hallsor said the city had required the developer to put in a secondary access but not specified exactly where it should go.

That, he explained, would be decided by the developer based on how it would fit in with future expansion, but he anticipated it would link up with Bailey St. - that runs off McConnell. At this stage, he also anticipated it would be a gravel road only.

One property, two houses

THE PLANNING committee has been asked to look at a request to construct a second dwelling on a single property. Lloyd and Maggie Hodges want to put up a second house on their 5207 Mountain Vista lot.

In making the request, they said they understood such a move was possible provided the lot was more than three-quarters of an acre in size.

Third party sign gets the nod

THE SKEENA HOME Builders' Association (SHBA) has been given the go-ahead to erect an advertising sign on vacant property near the Dudley Little (new Skeena) bridge.

Because the association does not own the land and a city by-law prohibits this type of "third party" sign, council permission had to be obtained even though the property owners had okayed the idea.

SHBA president Doug Fell said the 5ft. x 8ft. unit sign would promote the Canadian Home Builders Association and its local affiliate.

City amends purchasing policy

EVERY QUALIFIED supplier or contractor is going to get a kick at the city business cat. That will be the result of a purchasing policy change approved by council.

The policy was originally worded so that a suppliers'/contractors' ability to meet city requirements and price were the criteria for awarding contracts.

Following on councillor Bob Cooper's suggestion, the policy now says "purchases should be as balanced as possible between suppliers," all other things being equal.

Executive appointment okayed

COUNCIL HAS given Don Gare permission to serve as an executive member of the B.C. Waste and Wastewater Operators certification committee.

The okay was required because the job means up to five days pay and benefits would have to be covered out of the travel and training account earmarked for Gare.

Other approvals given by councillors were the declarations of June 19 as HOWDOYOUO Day and July 19-25 Royal Life Saving Week.

Customs officers get your number

TERRACE — There soon won't be any excuses for people who say they can't declare goods bought in Hyder, Alaska.

Canada Customs is changing from a toll-free line from Stewart to Prince Rupert to a Zenith number.

It'll connect to the Beaver Creek, Yukon post which is manned seven days a week, 24-hours a day.

"They can always get someone on duty. In Prince Rupert at nights and on weekends, that wasn't possible," says Prince Rupert-based Canada Customs official Larry Enders.

He says approximately 500 people now phone from Stewart to report goods bought in Hyder.

"Those are the honest ones," Enders added.

He's reluctant to guess how many people do not make declarations and how much money is lost as a result.

Canada Customs did have a post at the border between Hyder and Stewart but it was taken out in the mid-1980s.

"The whole situation up there with Hyder is a Catch-22. If we did put one in there, in a month we wouldn't need it," said Enders.

That's because the amount of goods people buying in Hyder and then having to pay duty on would decline, he said.

"My guess is that Canadians would no longer be shopping there and merchants would stop stocking their shelves," said Enders.

He added that putting in a post would have to be balanced against duties received.

The new Zenith number is Zenith 2305.

New board elected

TERRACE — The Terrace Seniors Housing Society has elected a new executive.

Margaret Kukkola is now president of the organization.

Addie Ryan holds the vice-president's spot with Aileen Frank, Patricia Wafzig and Tina Brouwer serving as secretary, treasurer and surveys organizer respectively.

Directors are Larry Merrill, Olga Power, Ted Hamer and Pat Olson while Betty Stewart repeats on the executive as past president.

Retiring directors were Bev Greening, Cliff Best, Rose Thomas, Betty Misfeldt and Al McKenzie.

Province leaping into student jobs

TERRACE — Student employment has just received a $3 million boost.

Up to 1,800 students will benefit from a provincial program running until mid September, says advanced education minister Tom Perry.

Seven host organizations have been set up to manage the program throughout the province. In the northwest it's the Native Development Corporation in Burns Lake. Other hosts are in Cranbrook, Fort St. John, Burnaby, Victoria and Vancouver.

The money will be used to partly reimburse employers for student wages.

According to Gary Kijowski, program supervisor at Burns Lake, half of a student's wage will be subsidized. For example, if a wage of $8 an hour is offered, an employer will receive a $4 reimbursement, the maximum allowed.

"I think it's great. It will help businesses to fill seasonal peak work - it's a tremendous advantage to compete," said Kijowski.

He also noted the skills and business knowledge offered to students.

"They will be able to use these skills for future jobs. (The program is) not only helpful to the employer, but most helpful to the student to become a competitive employee."

Student earnings will also help pay for tuition costs in the fall.

The program also offers opportunities for groups that are often disadvantaged, including single parents, aboriginals, visible minorities and persons with disabilities. An employer can request that the potential employee be from these groups.

Kijowski said that interested students should conduct a regular job search, including going to Canada Employment Centres or outreach programs and sending out resumes. He also suggested that students should make potential employers aware of the provincial program.

There are requirements for both students and employers.

Employers must offer full-time employment that is in addition to the regular number of positions, and the job must offer some skill enhancement.

The job must also be located in B.C. and provide employment for the duration of the program.

Students must be Canadian citizens or landed immigrants, as well as permanent residents of B.C. They must also be at least 15 years old to participate in the program.

Students must have attended school in the past year, or must be planning to attend school in the upcoming year.

The program is part of the BC 21 initiative, introduced in the last budget, to expand and diversify the provincial economy for the 21st century.

Interested employers in the Northwest can contact the Burns Lake office to receive applications.

Employers and employees outside of Vancouver or Victoria can call toll-free 1-800-663-7867 or the Burns Lake office at 692-3188 for more information.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Mapping and Charting Establishment will be conducting gravity anomaly surveys to assist in the completion of the National Gravity Database held by Energy, Mines and Resources Canada. These surveys will take place between the Cassiar highway and the Canada/US border from Terrace to Mt Edziza Provincial Park. Surveys will be conducted during the period 16 June to 10 July 1993.

The National Gravity Data Base was created to store this data and meet the needs of the national and international geoscientists. Scientists use this information for many purposes with more uses being developed as time passes. The data can be used in studies of crustal movements (earthquake prediction), to refine the known size and shape of the earth and to advance scientific knowledge.

To meet these requirements, gravity points are spaced on a 10 km grid. Using three Hughes 500E helicopters, surveyors fly between points, landing at each point. Once on the ground, the surveyor will take measurements for gravity, position and time using a gravity meter and a Global Positioning System receiver. Clear areas for landing are chosen and no materials are left behind.

Inquiries may be directed to Captain R. Beddington, Directorate of Geographic Operations 3, National Defence Headquarters, Major General George R. Pearkes Building, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0K2. Phone inquiries may be made to the above at (613) 992-7500, Fax (613) 996-3328.

Congratulations! Annual cadet inspection

SCENES OF AN INSPECTION - On June 9, members of the 747 Unicorn Squadron had their annual inspection at the Terrace-Kitimat airport in front of a capacity crowd.

Major J.S. Desrosiers, base personnel services officer at CFB Chilliwack, inspected the squadron, which was in training since last September.

Awards were given out for the best first year cadet, best attendance, non-commissioned officer, most improved cadet, esprit de corps and cadet of the year.

A spirited performance was also given by the squadron's band, which included bagpipes, brass, and percussion.

The squadron even received a new mascot - a unicorn!

ABOVE RIGHT - Corporal Hill strikes a proud pose with the award for best uniform in one hand and the squadron's new unicorn mascot in the other.

RIGHT - Following the inspection, warrant officer second class Hill demonstrates a Mach II campsite that the squadron recently built.

Ball visits Terrace

A ball came to town last Friday, but the royalty was of a different sort.

White gloves and glass slippers were replaced by hiking boots and dreadlocks, as the treeplanters' ball graced Terrace.

Dubbed "The treeplanters' guide to the galaxy," the event showcased a frenzied musical performance, courtesy of Vancouver-based Roots Roundup.

The band played its signature mixture of funk 'n' roll, while the audience danced the night away. About 200-250 people were at the show.

Roots Roundup played two sets, including a lengthy epic that featured bits of songs from groups as diverse as Tom Cochrane, No Means No, the Knack and Talking Heads.

In between sets, a presentation was given by Garth Lenz from the Friends of Clayoquot Sound.

The show was organized by Doug Gook, a member of the Forest Protection Allies (FORPA), which is an environmental group based out of Quesnel. Part of the proceeds went to support FORPA.

But this was more than just a magical musical tour. Education was also on the agenda, as members of the Environmental Youth Alliance (EYA) gave a presentation to students at Skeena Jr. secondary school during the day.

"The idea is to encourage students in their community to establish the (environmental) issues that concern them, and take steps to effect positive change, no matter how small," said Alliance member Anne Thompson.

The alliance is travelling with the band, giving talks to students along the way.

ROOTS ROUNDUP guitarist Greg Hathaway kicks out the jams at the treeplanters' ball on June 11.

An example of "positive change" recently took place in east Vancouver, when alliance and community members converted a lifeless sandpile into a new habitat, complete with a pond and gardens.

Another project was cleaning up polluted streams in Stanley Park.

The EYA is based out of Vancouver, but has an established network throughout Canada. It publishes its own newspaper, and is holding camps in July and August on Flores Island in the contentious Clayoquot Sound.

The camps will bring together students from across B.C. to learn about leadership training, working in groups and bio-diversity.

Thompson was quick to point out that the group strives for a balanced approach. "The idea is not to say that logging jobs are not important. We're not eco-terrorists. What we're trying to do is encourage kids to take leadership in environmental issues that they believe in, and if possible, encourage working within the community to do this."

Roots Roundup guitarist Greg Hathaway agreed. He said the group wasn't anti-logging, but supported alternative logging techniques that would both employ more people and allow for sustainable forests.

The tour began June 4 in Williams Lake, and has visited various northwest points including Prince Rupert, Burns Lake and Smithers. It ends June 19 in Kamloops.

Haisla camp set to open in July

For the second straight year, Rediscovery summer camps will be held in the beautiful Kitlope valley.

Three camps will be held in July and August. Organizer Corrina Wilson says that the camps are a good opportunity for the kids to get to know one another and to learn about different cultures and the history of the location.

Native elders from the area will speak about local history. They will be sharing their knowledge of "old ways" to help give the kids a better understanding of the area and to enhance self-esteem and a sense of community.

The camps are associated with the Rediscovery International program in Victoria.

The first camp, Haidagwai, was set up in the Queen Char-lottes in 1977 by founder Thom Henley.

Now, there are 17 camps located throughout Canada and the U.S. There is even a camp in New Zealand.

Last year, about 45 kids participated in a single camp. This year, camps are offered for different age groups.

The first camp will be held July 5-14 for ages 12-15. The next one is planned for July 17-30 for ages 16-18, and the final camp will be held August 5-18 for ages 19 and up.

The maximum amount of people per camp is 25.

For more information, contact Corrina Wilson at 632-3308.

Pioneer publisher and cribbage winner

Poor eyes don't stop champion: that's what the Calgary Herald wrote about local pioneer lady Belle Watt (nee Franks).

Dealing with worsening eyesight hasn't stopped Belle Watt from becoming Alberta's top seniors cribbage player. In fact, she thinks she's a better player since the deterioration of her retina made it difficult to see the cards on the table.

Belle is now legally blind. "I have to concentrate even more on my hearing," says the 86-year-old who, along with partner Aureore Poirier, won the gold medal at the recent provincial invitational cribbage championship in Edmonton.

Because cribbage involves matching the value of opponents' cards to achieve specific totals, Belle has to peer closely at her own hand, while co-players call out the combination of other cards laid on the table. Belle's opponents have learned that seven decades of playing cribbage make her tough to beat.

Belle and her partner just recently played in Calgary and then in Edmonton. They won the gold in both places.

Belle, who is not just lucky in cribbage, has recently had a second book published. She will bring it with her later in July

"Here 'n There"

by Yvonne Moen

when she comes down for the Old Timers dinner.

In 1908, when she was one year old, Belle arrived in Terrace on the paddle wheeler Port Simpson. She was with her mother Mattie Frank, her seven-year-old sister Luella, and her brothers, five-year-old Ivan and three-year-old Floyd. The Franks were one of Terrace's pioneer families.

I will let everyone know when Belle will be in Terrace with her new book.

Belle Watt is a great-great-grandmother who published her first book when she was 82. She is now 86, and is already working on her third book.

An early reminder: Tickets are already available for the 1993 Old Timers reunion banquet, which will be held July 31 at the Terrace Inn.

Tickets are available at Rose's Ladies Fashion and at Northern

Health Care. For more information call 635-2723.

The Old Timers first held a dinner on Dec. 31, 1927 at the Terrace Hotel.

There were 16 guests who had been living in Terrace or the district for twenty years or more. Mr. Geo Little was the dinner host.

Among those who were present were H.L. Frank, C.F.A. Green, Chas Giggy, Charles Durham, L. Bethurem, James Carruthers, Knute Olson, Wm. West, V. Sousie, B. Collbachimi, Ed Michaud, W. Washburn, Walter Warner, Donald Bruce and Chas. Swanson.

Dinner was announced for 7 p.m. and all were present. A fine spread of turkey and all the seasonal delicacies were provided.

After dinner, the guests were joined by some friends who were not yet eligible to qualify.

There were a lot of old time

stories and experiences to be told. Many a good laugh was had. Lots of old songs were sung and some of the old pioneers sang for the occasion. J. McLaren provided music.

The dinner proved to be so popular that there was a unanimous feeling that it should be made an annual affair. The gathering ended with the pioneers singing "Auld Lang Syne."

So make sure to get your ticket for this year's 1993 Old Timers dinner.

Access awareness for all

THE ADVISORY COMMITTEE of the B.C. Paraplegic Association put on a display at Skeena mall June 6-7, which coincided with Access Awareness week. The committee wants to make people more aware of the obstacles that persons in wheelchairs face. Above, vice-chairman Ray Johnson demonstrates the difficulties of moving from a car to a wheelchair.

Josée Banville

Off to Quebec

18-YEAR-OLD Josée Banville is off to Quebec this summer.

She was selected for the 1993 Summer Language Bursary Program and as a result is going to Trois-Rivières.

It's not her first Quebec exchange trip.

She went there last summer as part of the Canada 125 exchange with a group of Quebec students.

Friends from that exchange will be reunited with her this summer in Trois-Rivières.

Banville won't have as much trouble with the language either, as both her parents are from a French background and still speak the language at home.

She'll be there for six weeks.

Gunter's Garden

by
Gunter Lenardt

COMFREY SYMPHYTUM OFFICINALE BORAGE FAMILY

This bold and leafy plant will dominate the location where it was planted.

Comfrey will die down in winter and return strong in the spring. It is a hardy perennial, grows upright with leaves lanceolate to ovate lanceolate.

The lower leaves are up to 10 inches long. Stems and leaves are green and hairy.

The flowers are blue yellow or white. Comfrey can grow up to 5 feet tall. It flowers from May through frost.

For many centuries comfrey was acclaimed by an herbalist to be a great healer. However, recent studies showed that this plant could be carcinogenic. Now it stands in the crossfire of opposing opinions.

Greeks and Romans used comfrey in many ways. It was used as a remedy for many internal problems and as an external application for wounds and broken bones.

A Greek physician by the name of Dioscorides prescribed the plant to heal wounds and mend broken bones during the first century.

The name comfrey derived from the Latin word CONVERVA, meaning knitting together or grow together. A contemporary of Dioscorides was the Roman naturalist Pliny.

He experimented with roots of comfrey. He found that if pieces of meat were cooked with the roots of comfrey, the pieces were all glued together in one lump. So it is no surprise that people were convinced that comfrey would close wounds and heal broken bones.

People found more to do with this herb. They cooked the leaves in soups and stews or added them to salads. Farmers used comfrey leaves as fodder for livestock as they are highly nutritious and contain close to 35 per cent protein.

Henry Doubleday, an Englishman, established a charitable association to research the cultivation and use of comfrey. He was deeply moved by the suffering of the Irish during the potato famine in the 1840s and had a vision that the world could be saved from hunger by comfrey. The association is still in existence today bearing his name.

MEDICINAL USES

Poultices of comfrey have been replaced by plasters and gauze in modern times. However, for bruises and external wounds, this herb is still an effective remedy.

ALLANTOIN is the healing compound in comfrey. It affects the multiplication of cells and tissue growth. Pharmacologists add allantoin to ointments and creams in order to treat skin problems.

CULINARY USES

Comfrey was once thought to be the fastest protein builder and a rare plant source of vitamin B12. It was once enjoyed by many a vegetarian in salad greens and as a pot herb.

However, recent studies indicated that when comfrey was fed to rats they developed liver tumors after six months. Most vegetarians discontinued the use of comfrey in their diet after hearing of these findings.

There is hardly a man alive who couldn't retire comfortably in his old age if he could sell his experiences for what it cost him.

What a year!

On June 4, grade 12 students from Caledonia walked down the aisle to signal the end of their high school careers.

They were taking part in the annual graduation ceremony, held at the REM Lee theatre.

It was a grand ending to a year that has seen many successes for Caledonia.

The school claimed many sports victories.

The boys basketball team won the northwest zone title and travelled to Nova Scotia, where they came second in two tournaments.

The boys and girls volleyball teams also won the northwest zone titles.

The badminton team won the northwest zone title, and ended up in eleventh place at a tournament held at Vancouver Technical high school.

The cross-country running team qualified for the provincial championships.

In soccer action, the boys team won the zone title and came 14th at the provincial tournament. Right-winger Jason Dvorak received a $400 athletic scholarship to attend Cariboo College in Kamloops.

Deb Casey, among her many other achievements, competed in an international competition held in Australia, where she claimed a gold medal. She also recently received her karate black belt.

The school managed to raise a whopping $2250 for the annual Milk Run, which is held to raise money for BC Blind Sports and Recreation.

Success was had in many other areas as well.

The concert band received a gold standing at the Pacific Northwest music festival, while the stage band won a silver standing and the choir claimed a bronze standing. The band also earned the Travel Award from Sight and Sound and received a recommendation to perform in MusicFest Canada, where they received a bronze standing.

The Skeena zone Drama Fest was held in March at the REM Lee theatre, and featured presentations from Masset, Prince Rupert, Kitimat and Hazelton. Melanie Conrad and Louie Pelletier, grade 12 students at Caledonia, performed Where Have All the Lightning Bugs Gone?, and were chosen to represent the zone at the BC Festival of the Arts held in Trail.

Exchange programs at the school also provided some students with some wonderful opportunities.

Jeff Smithank was this year's candidate for the 'Encounters with Canada' program, and he travelled to Ottawa for a week.

Meanwhile, Dawn Thompson was chosen to represent Caledonia at the 'Forum for Young Canadians,' also held in Ottawa.

Deb Casey, a grade 11 Caledonia student, became the first student ever from the area to be accepted at the prestigious Lester B. Pearson College on Vancouver Island.

Romy Makipar will be going to Brazil next year for a rotary exchange, while Curtis Bretherick, another rotary exchange student, will be returning from Sweden this summer.

Rotary students currently at Caledonia are Inga Gerhards, Marlannew Ticklen and Sayuri Kobashi.

8 Glasses A Day Water Facts

VARIETIES OF WATER

There are many different types of water available for consumption, the most common being the following three:

1) Mineral Water - drinkable water taken from an underground source with not less than 500 mg per litre of dissolved solids.

2) Purified Water - water produced by distilling, deionization or reverse osmosis or other suitable methods where a bottled water product contains no more than 10% of dissolved solids.

3) Distilled Water - meets the same standards as purified water but has been boiled or vaporized and condensed.

Of these three, the most appealing, for drinking water, has been purified by Reverse Osmosis. Combined with pre-filtration and sterilization, it produces a superior tasting product, especially compared to the "flat" taste of distilled water.

THINK DAD . . . MAKE HIM GLAD

Fathers Day is Sunday, June 20

Cooking up the perfect Father's Day gift

What's the best way to your dad's heart? a) Through his stomach; b) Through his computer; c) With your annual Father's Day gift (yet another necktie?); d) Through Micro Cookbook software; e) All of the above.

If you answered "e," you're right. Micro Cookbook from Pinpoint Publishing will solve all your Father's Day problems. Not only is it a great gift, but it will help you prepare a feast fit for a father.

Available for DOS and Windows, it is the best-selling cooking software available. More than 1,000 recipes will allow you to chop hours of planning and preparation from your schedule. Best yet, you can add an unlimited number of your own favorite recipes. The product lets you find recipes fast by cookbook, recipe name, ingredients — even by the contents of your refrigerator.

You can also find your way into your dad's heart in a heart-healthy way. Recipes hand-selected by Pinpoint's registered dietitian make this software ideal for creating a healthy eating plan. A nutrition summary is calculated for every recipe, as well as those you add yourself, so you can whip your dad's favorite recipes into shape.

Fun, fast and easy

Micro Cookbook helps you plan the ideal menus for you and your family. It can even scale recipes and menus for any number of people, while automatically performing measurement conversions. You can print recipes on standard pages or index cards.

According to Gregory Hastings, vice president of Pinpoint Publishing, "We've developed a way to combine the excitement of food and entertaining with the promise of time-saving computer technology. Cooking at home and health-conscious eating are on the upswing. This is the perfect tool to help cooks with both, so you and dad have more time to enjoy a superb meal with friends or family. You can even help him make more exciting and healthful office lunches."

A Father's Day barbecue

Now that you've selected the ideal present for Father's Day, put it to good use by planning the perfect barbecue.

One suggestion is the butterflied leg of lamb — barbecued to dad's specifications and served with a gingery orange sauce. Mixed vegetables are also cooked on the grill in individual foil packets. Even though it is dad's special day, the Kahlua-flavored chocolate cheesecake may steal the show!

PLAN A FEAST fit for a father with Micro Cookbook software.

The complete menu includes:

- Butterflied Lamb Leg
- Golden Ginger Curried Rice
- Grilled Mixed Vegetables
- Armenian Spinach Plum Salad
- Crusty Garlic French Bread
- Kahlua Fantasy Chocolate Cheesecake.

The list of gifts for dad changes with time

When the idea of Father's Day was first introduced, gifts for dad were limited. You could have bought him an uncomfortable starched collar, and even underscored it with a 25-cent collar button, some arm bands, sock garters or a croquet set.

In 1993 gift options such as pocket calculators, walkmans, golf or tennis gear, power tools that do everything but draft plans and build the finish project for him changed all that.

Start with something to wear, easily the favorite of givers and getters, according to research done by the Father's Day Council. It's the gift of choice by a ratio of 24 to 1 over any other category. But it's a broad classification that embraces everything from hats and caps to all kinds of footwear. You can lavish dad with a couple of sports shirts or dress shirts with harmonizing ties. Look through what he needs in such practical things as swimwear or beach wear, slacks and a sports jacket, socks, pajamas, a robe or an item of jewelry — tie clip, collar pin, cuff links, ID bracelet.

If he is into technology, you can start with a little calculator and move up to a 486DX personal computer that crunches figures and spews out words with miraculous integrity. An electronic pocket organizer that keeps a record of addresses, phone numbers and even writes out memos is perfect for the busy dad.

How could he do without a CD player, the ultimate music machine? Coming soon is the new "CD fidelity" digital tape players. He probably has a VCR, but if he doesn't he's been a "deprived dad," so make tracks for the store where you can buy him years of viewing and listening pleasure. A video camera will preserve the most memorable episodes of a lifetime.

A sporting watch is a great gift for sporty dads

A SPORTING GIFT FOR SPORTY DADS — The new Swiss Army® Brand Renegade Watch is the perfect gift for dads or anyone who is into active sports. At a suggested retail price of $75, the affordable Renegade Watch features precision Swiss quartz movement, a magnified date window and luminous hands in a rugged black case that is water resistant to 166 feet.

If someone on your Father's Day list is into sports, why not be a sport yourself — give him one gift that is right for every activity or just taking it easy. But where can you find the perfect gift?

One affordable solution is the new Swiss Army® Brand Renegade Watch from the company that markets the legendary Victorinox® Original Swiss Army Knife. At a suggested retail price of $75, it's one piece of high-quality sports gear dad will never need to take off.

A watch with style

The Renegade features rugged, sports-watch styling, with a black face accented by luminous green hands, numerals and markings that are easy to read day or night. A special magnifying glass over the calendar window, usually found on more expensive sports watches, gives dad the date at a glance in big, bold numbers; while the sweep-second hand and precision Swiss quartz movement will ensure he's always on time.

Regardless of dad's favorite sports — from sky diving to SCUBA and everything in between — the Swiss Army Brand Renegade is built to take as much punishment as dad can dish out. It is shock-proof and water-resistant to 166 feet, and the perforated black Amitel band will keep him cool, comfortable and very stylish.

The Swiss Army Brand Renegade Watch also comes in a smaller size that is perfect for sports-minded women and teens. It is available nationally at sporting goods stores, department stores, jewelers and other fine retailers.

Give dad's gift a bit of thought for Father's Day

With Father's Day just ahead, you probably want to give dad a gift that won't end up in the back of his closet with the rest of his "special" neckties. Chances are, dad's tool box already includes a trusty power drill or power screwdriver for making those odd repairs and home improvement projects around the house. But few family handymen are fortunate enough to have a complete set of drilling and screwdriving bits that will help them tackle most any project they will face. In fact, most know all too well the frustration of starting a project only to realize that they're missing just the right-size accessory.

Consider these useful accessory sets from Black & Decker, priced less than $29, that provide everything dad will need:

• 47-Piece Screwdriving set — contains a wide assortment of screwdriving bits for most common uses, plus both metric and fractional sockets. Also, a flexible bit-up holder lets dad work around corners and at hard-to-reach angles. A durable, all-in-one storage case prevents lost pieces and is great for keeping the tool box and workbench organized.

• Cordless Screwdriver Versatility set — includes the essential accessories for getting the most out of any cordless screwdriver: a keyless chuck that turns a cordless screwdriver into a 1/2-inch drill, five countersink/screw pilots for drilling pilot holes and "sinking" screw heads below surfaces for a finished appearance, plus five assorted sockets, a socket adapter and flexible bit tip holder.

• 14-Piece Buller® Drill Bit set — the handyman's favorite drill bit features an exclusive "pilot point" that penetrates metal and wood on contact, eliminating bit walking.

• Scorpion® Anti-Slip Bits and Nutdrivers — provides an assortment of double-ended screwdriver bits that prevent slipping and stripping, plus seven nutdrivers for driving hex-head screws, bolts and nuts with ease.

To complete your Father's Day gift package, you might want to include some instructions and materials for a weekend project so that dad can put his new tool accessories to use. One good project to start with: a tie rack, for all his Father's Day gifts from years past.

ALL-IN-ONE ACCESSORY SETS, all under $29 — Black & Decker offers a variety of great gift ideas for Father's Day.

Father's Day: the perfect excuse for a wardrobe update

A quick peek into a man's closet is often like a look into his past. In many cases, it's not uncommon to find pants, jackets and shoes that have seen better days. More embarrassing than just knowing they're there, however, is actually seeing him wear these clothes in public!

In time for Father's Day, Claiborne, the menswear division of Liz Claiborne, Inc., would like to offer a few suggestions on how to help the men in your life make the transition into the styles of the '90s.

You might remind him that charitable donations are tax-deductible and there is a large demand for men's clothes. But, in light of Father's Day, it may be easier to update his wardrobe under the guise of gifts. There are many affordable, classic options from which to choose:

• Start slowly with simple items like the essential white or denim shirt and a neutral-toned basketweave sweater.

• For a dash of elegance with relaxed appeal, upgrade from a cotton to a silk chambray shirt.

• To make more of a statement, try a great vest like the retro-looking black and camel vertical-stripe knit from Claiborne.

• When it comes to bottoms, cotton twill pants in colors like stone, khaki or navy always work.

• Don't forget about his work-day attire: a tie with pin dots, intricate swirls, geometric patterns, even stars, will add character and help update a traditional suit.

• Complete the transition with a dash of crisp, clean cologne such as Claiborne for Men.

Remember, be kind and understanding when steering him through this process. Many of his old clothes may have great sentimental, if not true antique, value.

Take steps to retrofit your dad

It's a far more complex world than the one in which many a dad found his first secure job. Robots have invaded the production line. Computers have sidelined bookkeepers and statisticians. Word processors do the work of a couple of secretaries. Electronic mail is becoming pervasive. The fact is, many dads are watching their good jobs evaporate under the influence of hi-tech contraptions that never need coffee breaks, health insurance, sick leaves or vacations.

As a society — as loving parents, wives, children — now is the time to step up and give supportive advice and help to the big job of "retrofitting dad," so he can find his way back to the mainstream with skills that will be demanded tomorrow to work with the tools of the next decade.

The recognition of what has happened and what is still happening is the first step in helping dad regain his niche in the economy. Then, steering dad into the kind of retraining that is geared to the demands of commerce and industry, most often a product of our technological and automated industrial restructuring, becomes a realistic option.

In 1750 the Industrial Revolution forced dad from the fields and smithy to teeming factories, the precursors of mass production. After the Civil War the potential of mass production began to replace the custom-made products that characterized most of what was made. Washing machines replaced the wash board and tub that mother grew up with. The electric refrigerator replaced the ice man.

And so it is that today's dads, the best in the world, willing, able and trained in one skill will, in the immediate future, acquire the new skills that a new century will impose on our culture. Governments are gearing up to speed up the process. Good schools are coming on stream to teach the new specialties to both new and older generations.

This year, make his day more special with an extra dollop of devotion, crowned with a cheerful smile and a pat of appreciation. Let him know that you understand that you care, that you'll love him, no matter what!

Treat dad to an electronic Father's Day

Does dad really need another tie, wallet or bottle of aftershave? If not, shopping at Radio Shack® may be a refreshing change this Father's Day...for yourself and dad.

With nearly 6,700 locations nationwide, personalized "no pressure" service and guaranteed customer satisfaction, Radio Shack is a convenient and sensible alternative to crowded malls and discount warehouses.

Why go from store to store — standing in line and dodging shopping carts — to find the perfect gift for dad, when you can shop at Radio Shack and choose from an extensive selection of electronic products within minutes?

What would dad like on his special day? Consider these smart gift suggestions from Radio Shack:

• In-tune dads — Dad has to hear the sound of Optimus®-brand stereo equipment with his own ears to believe the crystal-clear sound of these high-performance audio receivers, compact disc players, cassette tape decks and speaker systems. Don't forget to choose from one of 17 different headphone models, including a new wireless headphone system.

• In-the-know dads — Keep dad in the know and choose from a complete selection of Realistic® amateur radio equipment, citizens band radios or home, mobile and hand-held scanners.

• On-the-go dads — Keep dad never more than a phone call away from family, friends or business with a Tandy® Personal Pager and a portable, transportable or mobile Tandy cellular telephone.

• Hot-rod dads — For dads who treasure their cars or trucks, give the security of a Mobile Alert® auto alarm system. Every 22 seconds a car is stolen. These easy-to-install vehicle security systems feature pocket

TREAT DAD TO A GREAT GIFT from Radio Shack® such as an Optimus portable CD player, a Realistic scanner, Tandy cellular phone, Tandy notebook computer or Micronta ultrasonic tape measure.

• Do-it-yourself dads — What dad doesn't like to tinker with tools? From Micronta® digital and analog multi-testers or soldering products to electronic tape measures and studfinders, Radio Shack has the professional-grade tool set collection for any "handydad."

• All-business dads — If your dad means business, consider six different models of rugged, lightweight Tandy notebook PC computers or choose from Radio Shack's extensive line of electronic business organizers — all designed to help dad manage his time and be more productive.

Give dad gift of a car wash

Another tie, aftershave, soap on a rope. If all your Father's Day gift ideas seem a little dull, consider something that will really make dad beam — a clean, shiny car for his day.

All it takes to please the father who loves a great-looking car is a visit to your local car wash. Gift certificates are available to meet any budget with a certificate for a single car wash costing only about $5. Economical gift books of five to 10 car wash coupons are also available, according to the International Carwash Association.

Specials that include interior shampooing and a variety of automatically or hand-applied protective polish treatments are much-appreciated gifts ranging from $8 to $40.

For the ultimate, check out the car polishing or detailing gift packages. Prices range from $150 to $250 depending on the special services selected for your dad's automobile.

A car wash gift will not only please dad, but will help the environment too. Car washes use only about 30 gallons of water per car, while most do-it-yourself washers use 80 to 140 gallons — and car washes dispose of wastewater correctly.

This year, help dad cure his putting woes

Having trouble getting a "read" on the perfect Father's Day gift? This year, you can "one-putt" your way into dad's heart with the latest in golf equipment.

Taylor Made's new line of Pro-Formance putters will make dad the envy of the putting green, with unique high-tech features wrapped in a distinctive, traditional look and feel.

"There's a major challenge in designing putters for today's players," says Pascal Stolz, product marketing manager at Taylor Made Golf Company, the golf industry pioneer in Metalwoods. "They want the latest in technology to help improve their game. Yet golf remains such a traditional game that products must maintain a subtle, tasteful appearance. The two don't always go together, but we summoned the help of the best players in the world to help us achieve that delicate balance."

PGA Tour professionals played a vital role in helping design Taylor Made's Pro-Formance lineup, which includes six right-handed putters and one left-handed model. The pros were involved in various stages of the design process, taking a perfectionist's view of the three key parts of the putter: 1) grip; 2) shaft; and 3) club head. Most importantly, they personally evaluated how well those three elements work — and look — together.

One of the more popular design elements on the back of the Pro-Formance putter is shaped like a semi-circle, the size of half of a golf ball, which has proven to help putting accuracy. The unique design actually helps serve a dual purpose by allowing more weight to be placed at each end of the club head. This is called "heel-toe" weighting and better stabilizes the club head in the event the ball is not hit squarely.

Another feature, called "glide sole design," allows for a smoother shot even when the bottom of the putter accidentally touches the putting surface before striking the ball.

The test professionals especially liked was the feel and fit of the Pro-Formance putter's longer Tour Wrap Pistol Grip, combined with a specially adapted steel shaft that is neither too stiff nor too soft.

All these features allow the Pro-Formance putter line to give dad more confidence on the putting green, with a more comfortable feel and better accuracy.

Taylor Made's Pro-Formance line of putters is available at pro shops and major sporting retail outlets nationwide. FD936472

Make your dad feel special on Father's Day with jewelry

Most people have a difficult time shopping for dad. In fact, he usually receives the same present year after year.

What gift will stand out when Father's Day is observed this year by 95 percent of all Americans? How about jewelry? A gift of jewelry is thoughtful, affordable and has long-lasting value, which dad will appreciate.

Conceived by Mrs. John Bruce Dodd in Spokane, Washington, in June 1910 as a tribute to her own father who raised seven children, Father's Day was created to honor all American dads. The New York-based Father's Day Council reports that Father's Day has been broadly accepted and observed ever since its inception, but, over the past two decades, it has become even more important.

What jewelry pieces can you purchase to show dad your appreciation without breaking your budget? According to Jewelers of America (JA), the national organization dedicated to consumer information and education about fine jewelry, the best items are practical ones. Money clips, tie tacs, key rings and cufflinks all fit that bill. The popular trend today is to incorporate sports and home improvement themes into the pieces. Money clips that bear a golf club or paint brush design or tie tacs that represent football helmets or basketball hoops are in demand this year. The best thing about these gifts is that they range in price from $8 to $35.

For further information or for a series of free pamphlets on tips for buying jewelry, contact JA's Consumer Department at 1115 Avenue of the Americas, 10th Floor, New York, NY 10036. FD936346

SEND DAD A CARD TO SHOW HOW MUCH YOU CARE

It's the very least you can do! You must send your dad a Father's Day greeting card before Sunday, June 20. And you'll find a mind-boggling choice at your local newsstand, drugstore, gift shop, department store — or wherever!

Today, now that letter writing seems to have diminished, there's hardly a better or less costly way to tell your dad that you're thinking of him and that you really care.

Traditional, humorous, even musical versions exist among all the greeting card options available today. Oversized cards are sure to get his attention, and a more normal size will make him just as happy.

This year, letter carriers will deliver about 100 million greeting cards to every corner of the country. These cards express love and admiration to every kind of dad, young or old, rich or poor, working or retired.

Remember, these greetings to dad's day can be bought as long as a week to get processed through the

Give dad a gift that gives back

Father's Day is almost here, and if the thought of another gift of neckties or aftershave leaves you cold, don't despair. This year, you could give the gift of fire protection and peace of mind for dad's most important papers and treasured belongings: a fire-safe security chest or file.

Sadly, fires damage or destroy more than 2,000 American homes and businesses every day. And while dad, like many other people, may store some important papers and valuables in a bank's safe deposit box, he probably still keeps certain documents, photographs, family heirlooms and other irreplaceables conveniently at home.

What's more, he may stash away those sometimes priceless belongings in a drawer or shoebox — where they are completely unprotected if fire should strike. Common metal lockboxes, used by many people to store insurance policies, bank books, tax records and the like, will act as incinerators during fire and reduce their contents to ashes.

That's why a Sentry® Fire-Safe™ security chest or security file makes a Father's Day gift that dad will truly use and appreciate. The only home storage containers of their size to pass the Underwriter Laboratories tests for fire protection, a security chest or file will give dad the peace of mind that his important possessions are safe and organized for easy access.

Convenient and practical, the storage containers are priced right for most gift-giving budgets. The chests, with suggested retail prices of $38 and $50 and the file for $84, give dad peace of mind that far outweighs the cost.

Sentry Fire-Safe security chests and security files are part of a complete line of security products that carry the UL classification for fire resistance. They are manufactured by Sentry Group, and are sold nationwide at K-Mart, Walmart, Target, Venture, Home Depot, and other mass merchandisers, discount stores, hardware stores and catalog showrooms. For the store nearest you, call 1-800-828-1438.

A gift for dads on the go

IDEAL FOR EXECUTIVE DADS or for dads who coach Little League, the Plus Cocoon pen and pencil set makes a perfect Father's Day gift. Constructed of sturdy plastic, the compact Cocoon fits securely into individual slots on a handsomely-designed clip-on holder. With Cocoon, dad can always be assured of having a pen and pencil at hand. FD93667

New look in pens

Single dads are on the rise

Single fathers are one of the fastest-growing segments in the work force, showing a rise of almost 35 percent over the past five years. The total now, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, exceeds one million and is growing fast. Single working mothers outnumber single dads by a margin of 4 to 1, but their numbers grew by 7 percent during the same time frame.

This phenomenon impels an appreciation of the fact that the care and feeding of the nuclear family is no longer just a woman's concern and burden.

Now fathers find themselves looking for flexible working schedules so they can fit together the puzzle of taking children to school, scouting and spending time together, while maintaining a job that provides the way to make it all possible. One solution is to switch from a day job to a night job. Father and child can then spend more of the child's waking hours together.

This brings up the concern for day care for children of gainfully employed parents. Good and affordable day care must and will get more attention as still more mothers roll up their sleeves with dads join the working world.

Single dads have yet to cross a formidable hurdle — the one imposed by bosses who rarely expect a father to take time away from a job to care for a young family. That role has been traditionally assigned to mother, but more and more will become a shared responsibility, especially where single-parenting is not a problem. FD936880

Skeena Angler

Rob
Brown

FRUSTRATED Marshall Perrin phoned me a while ago. "Gee, you're a hard guy to get hold of," he said.

I was reluctant to tell him I had to adopt an evasive posture to elude my creditors as well as the numerous foresters, commercial fishermen, politicians, land speculators and indignant God-fearing folk who take exception to my weekly scribbles.

"I've been busy," I answered lamely.

The reason for Marshall's frustration was not the difficulty he had contacting me.

"Was that you fishing just above Upper Coldwater last Tuesday night, just before dark?"

"Yeah, I was there," I admitted.

"Did you see all those little olive coloured mayflies coming off?"

"There was no hatch where I was," I recalled.

A tone of incredulity crept into Marshall's voice. "Man, they were everywhere up stream where we were, and the fish were takin' 'em like crazy. Some of those trout were really big too. We tried everything, but all we could catch were diddies."

I'd been there. The sun slips below the mountains. The wind dies. The water gets as flat as a mill pond. Presto - the air is full of little olive mayflies and the river covered with rise rings.

You frantically find a decent fraud, then knot it on. You make a few tantalizing drifts over the largest and closest fish, snip the pattern off when nothing happens, then knot on another. And another. And another.

In the ebbing light each fly is more difficult to put up than the last. The trout rise all around your flies, treating them with disdain until, finally, you're left standing mid-stream, your arsenal exhausted.

Here you are, outfitted with hundreds of dollars of sophisticated gear and a brain crammed full of trout lore and all you can catch are a few squaw fish and brace of tiny troutlings.

It's a humbling experience.

Determined to stop these humiliations, I put away the rod in favour of the net and the screen, trapped some of these frustrating flies, then scoured trout journals for clues that would bring these beatings to an end.

I've learned enough now to do fairly well during the hatch of the little olive mayflies. I pass my findings on to do my bit for the trout fishing portion of humanity.

The elusive little devil so capable of stirring up trout and anglers goes by the name Epeorus.

Unlike most of his three tailed cousins, he has but two. In his underwater/nymphal stage, he prefers the fast lane crawling around on the bottom of riffles and glides.

Because he clings so tenaciously to the bottom, Epeorus seldom winds up floating in the drift. When the reproductive urge gets strong Epeorus and his pals tend to get agitated and reckless, much like people.

Just prior to their emergence they gambol about on the tops of rocks where strong currents hurl them downstream.

Knowing this, the educated fly fisher, suspecting a hatch, goes to the stream armed with some dark, two-tailed nymphs fashioned from the tail fibres of a ring necked pheasant and ribbed with fine copper wire: small dressings no more than 3/4 of an inch long, the three or four turns of fine lead wire under their thoraxes flattened with pliers.

When the adult Epeorus reaches the surface, he seldom floats helplessly downstream like so many other mayfly duns. Instead he bursts free. For this reason the traditional, free floating dry fly will seldom fool a trout.

The fish want emergers, so you must give them a fly that gives them that impression.

Wrap a yellow floss body on a size 14 dry fly hook, dub a little dark fur at the upper end, tie on few partridge feather fibres as legs and fish it as you would a freely floating dry fly and you will be in business.

No more fuming; no more embarrassment. It's simple, as Columbus is reported to have said, when you know how.

Bluebacks shatter time barriers in successful championship assault

"He's really found the stroke."

And Kevin Andolfatto's opponents at the Junior Provincial long course swim championships couldn't argue with Blueback coach Mike Carlyle's assessment.

Andolfatto, 13, sliced more than three seconds off his best time to carve his way to a gold medal in the 200m Breast.

The 100m Breast saw the same impressive improvement. Going into the event ranked 10th, he sped to a silver medal, improving a full five seconds.

Although Andolfatto had put in a gold-silver performance at the February short course championships, Carlyle pointed out he was one of the younger swimmers this time.

That's because his birthday fell in March, promoting him to the 13-14 years age group.

Another Blueback who left past performances in his wake was Jason Kumpolt, winner of both silver and bronze.

Having qualified for the 100m Fly final in a time three seconds faster than his best, Kumpolt then turned in a performance Carlyle described as "just incredible."

"Everything just clicked. It was so exciting to watch," he said of the 10-year-old's silver medal swim during which he lowered his time another seven seconds.

Kumpolt established another personal mark in coming away with the bronze in the 200m Individual Medley and reached the finals in four of his five.

Also flying was Jamie Kerman, 13, who entered the pool ranked 13th in the 100m Fly but gave the lie to that by lunging to a bronze.

"Everything just clicked. It was so exciting to watch." .....Mike Carlyle.

pointed out, adding it was a continuation of the steady improvement the swimmers had been showing all season.

He was particularly pleased with the performances of Downs, Kumpolt and Armstrong because the Victoria championships was the first trip south for all three.

The Points North team as a whole could also be pleased with its efforts, he added. One of 28 teams taking part, the northwesterners only had 14 swimmers compared to the 20-30 being fielded by other clubs.

That left them back in eighth in numbers but when the final points were tallied, Points North had cracked the top four at the meet.

The Bluebacks will be hoping for more provincial medals next month when Aimee Peacock and Tori McKenzie compete in the Seniors, July 2-4, and a squad of seven tackle the following weekend's 'AAA' age-group championship.

Although a medal eluded him in the 200m Fly, Kerman slashed a staggering 12 seconds off his personal best in finishing fifth.

Kerman and fellow Terratec Seth Downs also picked up silver as members of the Points North 400m Free relay team.

That brought the Blueback medal haul to seven, a third of the Points North total of 22: four gold, 14 silver and four bronze.

With Downs (200m Free) and Randee Armstrong (girl's 10 years-under 100m Free and 200m I.M.) both making finals and swimming to personal bests, Carlyle was more than happy with the results.

"We had 76 per cent best times," he

needed

With the end of the season fast approaching, Terrace Minor Baseball is looking forward to this year's provincial championships.

If the players can get there, that is.

Senior commissioner Mona Nester said three teams are eligible for the playdowns.

The Bambino division, players aged 10-12 years, have a date in Nanaimo, the 13-15 years Junior Babe Ruth squad is set to go to Courtenay and the Senior Babe Ruthers, 16-18 years, will be heading for Duncan.

The problem, she explained, is none of these teams have a regular sponsor.

"Terrace Minor Baseball is not a wealthy organization," Nester pointed out.

Therefore, the players themselves will be hard at work in the coming weeks trying to raise the approximately $500 each needed to cover travel expenses.

But with only a month in which to raise that cash, the car washes, bottle drives and raffle tickets sales that can be organized in so short a time may not be enough.

Therefore, Nester said, the organization was turning to the business community for help.

Letters have been sent out asking businesses to sponsor players on an individual basis, rather than sponsoring an entire team.

In return for a donation of $100, the player will wear the business' crest on their jersey throughout the provincial championships.

Sponsors can, if they wish, support a specific player or ask that their donation goes to a particular division.

And while this approach has been directed at businesses community, anyone in the community can help out by giving the boys a chance to raise money by doing odd jobs.

And, Nester added, any ideas on how they could raise the needed money would also be welcome.

HEAD DOWN after a heads up play, the Credit Union runner beats the relay to the plate in weekend baseball tourney action. The Video Stop outfielder hanging on to the ball too long, the runner had seized the opportunity to put another run on the board.

Haldane closer to Olympics

When the Canadian volleyball team takes to the court at the Atlanta Olympics, Terrace could have a special interest in the results.

That's because Jason Haldane, one of its own, will likely be wearing the national colours.

Haldane, 21, is one of only nine non-professionals to be selected for the Canadian team after this year's try-outs.

It's just one more step in his triumphal progress through the volleyball ranks and puts him firmly on the path that leads to '96 Olympics.

There'll be more try-outs to get through before then, but it's unlikely there'll be many changes made to the national squad from here on in.

Break away

WHAT Terrace Youth Soccer's under-7s lack in size, they more than make up for in enthusiasm. So much so that being called off the field for a substitute isn't always greeted with a great deal of enthusiasm. But they know they'll be back out there soon enough. Anyone wanting to take in the action will find the youngsters giving it their all at the Christy Park fields every Saturday morning, 9:30 a.m. start.

Northmen lower boom on Rupert

Reality can be appallingly painful.

The Prince Rupert Rainmen discovered that in spades May 5 when they faced the Terrace Northmen in North Coast Rugby Union league action.

Rupert had good reason to be confident when they stepped out on to the Northwest Community College pitch.

After all, they'd clobbered the Northmen 17-0 in their last meeting, only Terrace's second defeat in three years.

Buoyed by that upset, the Rainmen had moved on to Smithers where they dropped the Camels 17-5 in the first game, then rallied from a 14 point deficit to earn a 17-17 tie.

Understandable, therefore, if they saw themselves as rolling like thunder across the rugby landscape.

Now they know better. Terrace are not sore losers: they just don't take kindly to being beaten.

Intent on wiping out the memory of that shock shut-out, the Northmen swarmed the visitors from the opening whistle.

When the dust of the hot summer night finally cleared, the bewildered Rainmen found themselves on the wrong end of a 40-0 massacre.

Leading the Northmen's merciless assault was Doug Wilson who went over for one of the team's five tries and found the uprights on two penalty and two convert kicks for a 15 point night.

Fleet-footed John McGowan hit double figures with two tries while Graham Bayles and Mark

Poppelton each went over once.

The remaining points came on a penalty try awarded by referee Malcolm Smith, a rare call in the league.

Recalling the aftermath of that earlier Rupert victory, Northmen David Hull said Terrace had been subjected to a fair amount of ribbing from their coastal rivals.

"Their big mistake was glorying too much in their win," he suggested.

As a result, Terrace had been determined to wreak vengeance and reassert their supremacy in the league.

Hull said the Northmen had completely dominated the game, snuffing out any Rupert attempt to counter attack and imprisoning them in their own end.

The Rainmen also missed the presence of Charlie Armstrong, he conceded. The architect of the victory over the Northmen, Armstrong had been sidelined with a season-ending shoulder injury.

The two teams were scheduled to go back at it last Saturday night as Rupert played SeaFest hosts to both Terrace and Smithers.

They'll meet again in a home-and-away series this weekend after which the Northmen travel to Smithers for the June 26-27 double-header wrap up to the season.

With a 6-1 record, Terrace has all but locked up first place yet again.

But with Rupert only two points clear of the Smithers and the Camels, the battle for the runner-up spot could go down to the wire.

New week, new leader

The Men's Slo-Pitch league found itself with a new leader last week, the third in as many weeks.

Westpoint Rentals took advantage of their games in hand to launch themselves to the top.

After overpowering Rudon 19-9 in the first June 4 game, they went straight back out to win a run-slingy duel with leaders SKB Molson Wreckers, 3-1.

That was enough to give them a one game edge in the standings, still with two games in hand.

Rudon's loss dropped the early leaders to third, two games back.

Meanwhile, Terrace Paving pushed Back Eddy by coming out on the right end of a 15-12 run fest.

Tyhee warm up for SVT

The Skeena Valley Triathlon is now just over three weeks away and potential entrants are well into their training.

But before testing their mettle before the hometown crowd, Terrace's own can take part in a dress rehearsal.

It's called the Tyhee Lake Triathlon and takes place a week Saturday, June 26.

Like the Skeena Valley Triathlon, this one consists of a 1.5km swim, 40km bike leg and a 10km run to the finish line.

This Saturday is the deadline for entries and the fees are $45 for individuals, $100 per team.

That's right, you don't have to do all three legs; just find a couple of people whose skills cover the other two components and you could be on your way to trio-triumph.

Lorraine Moran, race director, said the Tyhee gave out $1,600 in cash prizes. More entries this year, of course, would mean that figure will rise.

For more information on the Tyhee, phone Bina Tucker (847-3095).

And don't forget to get those entries in for Terrace's own triathlon.

It takes place Sunday, July 11, the start and finish line being at Furlong Bay (Lakelse Lake provincial park).

To enter, or to get any more information about the SVT, drop into the office in the Skeena Mall, phone 635-1581 or send a fax to 635-1582.

The entry fee is $55 for individuals or $130 for teams, provided you register by June 15. After that, it'll cost you an extra $10.

And the sooner entrants get their names in, the sooner organizers will know how many T-shirts to order and ensure every participant gets one.

SVT is also looking for volunteers to help put on what is one of the biggest sporting events in the northwest.

To volunteer, the same contacts methods as entering apply.
